What is a Home Page?

When you initially open up your Web browser, the very first page that you will see is called the "home" page. The home page is your jumping off point to the rest of the Web. You can specify absolutely any page on the Web as your browser homepage.

How To Set Your Browser Start Page in Internet Explorer

1. Click on your Internet Explorer icon; you'll find this in your Start menu, or the toolbar at the bottom of your desktop window.
2. Type in www.pbcschools.org
3. Go to toolbar at the top of browser, and click on "Tools", then "Internet Options".
4. At the top of the pop-up, you'll see a "Home Page" box. The address of the site that you are currently at (www.pbcschools.org) is there. Press the "Use Current" button to specify this page as your home page.

How to Set Your Browser Start Page in Firefox

1. Click on the Firefox icon to start up your browser.
2. Navigate to www.pbcschools.org.
3. At the top of your browser window, you'll see the Firefox tool bar (this includes the words "File", "Edit", etc.). Click on Tools, then Options.
4. The popup window will open up with the default option of General. At the top of the window, you'll see "Home Page Locations." Click on "Use Current Page."

How to Change Your Google Chrome Home Page

1. On the Google Chrome browser toolbar, click the icon that looks like a wrench.
2. Click on "Options".
3. Select "Basics".
4. Here, you have several options for your home page. You can set your home page with www.pbcschools.org, you can add the "Home" button to your Chrome browser toolbar so you can access that page at any time, and you can also select if you want your home page to be the page that automatically starts up when you initially open Google Chrome.

How to Change Your Safari Home Page (for Macs)

1. Open the Safari application.
2. Decide what Web page you would like to make your homepage and navigate to that page.
3. When the page has loaded, click "Safari" and choose "Preferences" from the navigation toolbar.

4. Select the "General" tab and choose "Set to Current Page." This will set the homepage to the page that is visible.
